Going to their corners after the fifth round the two young men staggered groggliy, and when they got up at the signal for the sixth they were scarcely signal for the sixth they were scarcely able to lift their arms. There was still some fury in their blood, however, and for a minute they fought in a clinch, but when they broke away neither was able to raise his glove for another blow.

According to the few who witnessed the fight, it was one of the most savagely fought they had ever seen. Both had trained for two weeks, Hayne at the Y. M. C. A. and Sherman in an uptown gymnasium.

Just before the game began the rooters | RUNS. in the right field bleachers had a lot of fun and threw the entire assembly into an uproar by cheering each new creation in hats worn by the women. A party of girls came in late, attired in the wierdest lot of headgear ever seen at a public gathering. As they passed into the makeshift field seats everybody got a peep at the bonnets, and the young women, blushing with confusion, had to run across the grass with a thousand taunting remarks aimed at every hat. "Dummy" Taylor added to the merriment by appearing for a moment in a last year's straw hat, which he had found in a locker, The crowd was bent on merrymaking, and never let up for a minute.
